

Commerce Secretary Henry A. Wallace with Edward U. Condon, Director of Bureau of Standards

TIME PRESENT IS THE LAST OF WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. THE FIRST
OF THAT TO COME . . .
Adapted from Da Vinci

Arrangements to display at the National Co-
atomic Inhof
1101 K Street
Washington

The atomic explosion of Hiroshima, August 9, 1945, was the first in a series of atomic explosions. It was the first of a new era in the history of mankind. It was the first of a new era in the history of science. It was the first of a new era in the history of the human race. It was the first of a new era in the history of the world. It was the first of a new era in the history of the future.

Our purpose in this article is not only to explain how atomic power can be used, but to emphasize your responsibility in the process of winning the atomic race, cooperation among nations, as the winning of peace there can be no peace, no security, no progress in a world where they are wholly devoted to maintaining the peace. You have the responsibility of determining the future of our world. Do other generations have had such a task and a need for great men to carry heavy loads and to make wise decisions.

Accession Number

99-1280

Description

The Committee on Atomic Information opened an exhibit at the Department of Commerce late this afternoon. Shown here at the exhibit are Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace (right) and Edward U. Condon, Director of the Bureau of Standards. From: Beth Gore.

Date(s)

March 12, 1946

8x10 inches (21x26 cm)

Black & White

Keywords

Cabinet officers

Exhibitions

People Pictured

Condon, Edward Uhler, 1902-1974

Wallace, Henry A. (Henry Agard), 1888-1965

Rights

The Library is unaware of any copyright claims to this item; use at your own risk.

Note: If you use this image, rights assessment and attribution are your responsibility.

Credit:

Harris & Ewing

Harry S. Truman Library & Museum.

Attention media: Please make note of this item's accession number. Print out this page and retain it for your permissions records before downloading this image file for possible publication. Library staff cannot sign permissions forms or provide additional paperwork. The Library charges no usage fees for downloaded images.